Backpacking in Australia

If you want a life-changing experience, then backpacking around Australia could be for you. It's an exciting country with amazing cities, beaches and deserts. It's true that getting there isn't easy and it's not cheap. That's why backpacking is the best choice, as you can camp or stay in hostels. Some backpackers even get a job to make extra money. Australia is great if you're not a native English speaker, because you'll improve your English by meeting locals and other travellers.

Backpacking is also a good way to improve your confidence and social skills. Many backpackers set off alone, and naturally feel quite nervous when they first arrive on the other side of the world. One of the most important, and rewarding, things about backpacking is making friends with other travellers. You'll probably get lonely travelling on your own, but if you stay in hostels, you'll find it easy and fun to make new friends.

To travel between Australian cities, there are buses, trains and even planes. However, to explore the countryside properly, you'll need to share a car or, better still, buy or hire a camper van with friends. That way, you can drive wherever you want and also sleep in the van, which will help you to save a lot of money.

Australia is a fantastic country and backpacking is a fun way to see it and make friends. It's a huge place though, so you need several weeks or months to explore it properly. This is difficult to do when you've got a family or a permanent job, so if you get the chance while you're young, it's certainly something to think about!
